Suicide Said to be Epidemic.

Dr. La Rue, the famous French au thority on abnormal phenomona, has, after exhaustive comparison of facts in France, Belgium, England and the United States, come to the conclusion that the inclination to suicide is a mania, and is epidemic. No learned authority has as yet discovered with exactitud whether malaria is epidemic or endemic, but it has been a matter of notoriety for nearly half a century, that the most reliable preventive and curative of the various forms of maiaria is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Restored patients have not only set the seal of their approbation upon it in malarial cases, but commended for rheumatism, kidney and liver trouble, nervousness dyspepsia and

Candid Confession.

Fair Phyllis, when I celebrate Thy wondrous beauty in my verse Thy graces rare enumerate
And lovingly thy charms rehearse

Pray deam not that my arder high, My fervent love, doth lead my muse Thy loveliness to magnify, Or overpay thy beauty's dues.

Nay, even my highest praises fail. So feeble is my muse's flight; And brightest fires of fancy pale Beside thy beauty's wondrous light

Yet, one poor merit may my muse, At least, my Phyllis, justly claim: Industriously doth see diffuse, And faithfully, thy beauty's fame;

For when rent is due and duns assail And inspiration there is not, The songs of love they never fail— They help the poet boil the pot.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

The remedy is intended specially for coughs, colds, croup, whooping cough and influenza. It has become famous for its cures of these diseases, over a large part of the civilized world. The most flattering testimonials have been received, giving accounts of its good works; of the aggravating and persistent coughs it has cured; of severe colds that have yielded promptly to its soothing effects, of the dangerous attacks of croup it has cured, often saving the life of the child. The extensive use of it for whooping cough has shown that it robs that disease of all dangerous constitutions of son-in-law."

"It is called—don't laugh—the profession of son-in-law." sequences. It is specially prized by mothers for children as it never fails to effect a speedy cure, and because they have found that there is not the least danger in giving it, even to babies, as it contains nothing injurious. Sold by A. C. Ireland.

A PROFESSION.

Miss Searles—And so you have quite finished your education?

Mr. Clayton—As far as books go. Bless me, I've spent enough time at it; hammering away since I was a tot of 5, poor little beggar!

"And now?"

"That's it. That's what I ask myself. 'Hello, old boy,' I say, 'to what use are you going to put all this hard won rubbish?' "Have you thought of a profession?" "No end of times and no end of profes-

"And why can't you choose?"
"Same old trouble with each—over-crowded."

"You studied law?"

"Yes. Worst crowded of all the profes-sions. Have to sit around half a dozen years or so twiddling your thumbs and watching your doorknob to see a client turn it." There's medicire."

"Yes, of course; overcrowded too. Be sides, it took me three years of manual training to find out I couldn't use a saw." "How about the ministry?"
"Frightfully overcrowded. Then I'm so deficient in reverence; not enough, per-haps, to make me a modern pulpit pet, but too much so for my own peace of mind. The ministry would never do."

"Have you thought of engineering?"
"Thought of it in all its branches; civil, electric, landscape, locomotive, all grossly overcrowded. Everything is over-Never saw such a state of

"Aud do you really intend to waste all that splendid education, Mr. Clayton?"
"It looks that way, Miss Searles. You see, I've thought of everything, balloon-ing and exploring and mining and treasure hunting and ostrich farming. Either it's all overcrowded or I'm not suited to it. Do you know, I had about given it up.

"But you must do something." "I've thought of that too."
"But you don't seem worried—scarcely

"What's the good? Something may turn up. If not, why worry?"
"Why don't you travel?"

"I've thought of that. I've thought of it several times—lately. Fact is, I've just been doing a little traveling that has given me a new train of thought."
"You were in the south, I believe?"

"Yes, at my dear old Uncle Jim's bed-ide. Poor old Uncle Jim! He was another father to me. It's strange how whimsical personal likings are. Uncle Jim liked me. Why, last winter he came all the way from home-rheumatism and all—just to see me play half back in the Thanksgiving day game. And after I made my long run and the winning touchdown the dear old fellow pushed through the crowd and caught me in his arms like a crazy man, laughing and cry-ing and making the funniest efforts to give the college yell. Dear old Uncle Jim! What good times we had together!" "Did he die?"

"Yes.

"Too bad!" "Thank you. We had many long talks together before—the end, and Uncle Jim put some new ideas into my head. We talked on this very subject that has inter-ested us tonight. Yes, and we talked of you, Miss Searles."

"Mr. Clayton!"
"Yes, Miss Searles. It would be a liberty to talk of you to any one else, but it wasn't with Uncle Jim. And I showed him your picture-the one I stole two years ago, you remember—and he liked it, and sent you his compliments and his best love. Uncle Jim was always a grand old

"But I don't see"—
"Pardon me, I am about to explain. It was Uncle Jim who suggested a new profession for me; at least, he called it a profession. He suggested that it wasn't as overcrowded as some of the others and that there was generally room in it for the right sort of man. Uncle Jim knew what he was talking about. He had the keenest head for business of any man I know, and I never met anybody whose advice I valued as highly. You seem to take an in-terest in my welfare, Miss Searles—do the details weary you?"
"No, Mr. Clayton. It was your—your flippancy over a serious subject that an-noyed me—a little. And this profession— does it give you hope of permanent employ-

"I'm sure it does. I wouldn't go into it if I didn't think so." "And it is congenial?"
"Very."

"I'm glad to hear it, Mr. Clayton. It is strange, though, that we didn't happen to mention it when we went over the various professions."
"Isn't it? This is something quite different, though. Perhaps that is the reason

"Mr. Clayton!" way. Oh, he was quite taken with your photograph. He actually made conditions, verbal, of course, but equally binding, that I should—well, I'll tell you about that afterward. The other details are all quite satisfactorily arranged, and—and, now, Alida, it only remains for you to—to approve the articles of partnership."

"Mr. Clayton, what do you mean?"

"You just now asked me why I didn't travel. That means go abroad. Well, I've made up my mind to go abroad—if you will go with me—as my wife."

"George Clayton, is this a proposal?"

"Alida Searles, does it need a tag?"

"But there's father. He will never consent to my marrying a—a—well, you consent to my marrying a—a—well, you know, George, you are not very prepossessing financially."

"You are quite mistaken about your father. I saw him first."
"You did?"

"You did?"

"Oh, yea. He's quite taken with the idea. Seems to think it's just the profession to suit me. Fact is, you know, I'm the heaviest depositor in papa's bank. Yes, Uncle Jim left me all his money—there's a deuced lot of it—the only conditions—verbal, you know—being that I marry at once and marry you."

"It is to fulfill your uncle's last request, then, that"—

"It is to fulfill your uncle's last request, then, that"—

"He was very good to me, Alida, and any little thing"—

"Oh, you—you aggravating—bear!"

"Then here's an attempt at asserting a bear's prerogative. And you will be Mrs. George Clayton, wife of the well known professional man of the manne name?"

lectual and physical future of her children depend largely upon the mother. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best of all medicines for maids, wives and mothers. It is intended to do but one thing and does that one thing thoroughly. It acts directly on the delicate and important organs concerned in wifehood and motherhood and makes them strong, healthy, virile, vigorous and elastic. Taken during the time of preparation, it banishes the trials and dangers of maternity. It insures the well being of the mother and the robust health of the child. It is the greatest of nerve tonics and nerve builders. Thousands of women have told the story of its marvelous accomplishments. Good medicine dealers sell it and will not advise a substitute in place of it.

In a letter to Dr. Pierce, Mr. C. A. McDonald, Connections with the main line and substitute in place of it.

He said he was a college chum of yours, but that you went to Europe to the best hospitals, while he commenced practice; that for thirty years you were considered one of the leading physicians in New York State, and he considered your remedies better than all others, and prescribed them daily in his practice. On the strength of this commendation I tried your 'Pavorite Prescription' and the 'Pellets.'
